Last week I went to watch the petition committee and saw the petition for the In care survivors Scotland. I was amazed at the little amount of information you were given. I would like to ask if you could take something into consideration and if possible make others aware. If and when a new model is found, the amount of people using the service will grow immensely. I heard them say 900 people are using the service. It doesn't sound like much but when it's easy to access by Internet etc, and others are willing and able to deal with what happened to them, I would expect the number of users to increase.

Also just because the person who gave evidence suffers from bi-polar and thoughts of self harm and suicide does not mean we all suffer from these thoughts. As all abuse is not the same, and we all deal with it differently.
