Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists Email of 19 June 2013

Dear Stuart

Thank you for your email.

The RCOG's response is as follows:

“We view this to be an important topic and as such have commissioned a new guideline in this area which will be written by specialists from a multidisciplinary group. This guideline should be published by the end of 2014. We will consider if we produce patient information on this topic when we have seen the first draft of the guideline.”
