

PE1530/P

Dr Edward Willhoft Email of 7 November 2014

It is absurd to allow Creationism in its various manifestations of scientific misuse, to be a part of any religious ideology posing as a valid science curriculum. I strongly urge all parties to read the fascinating and destabilizing arguments (for the Creationists) based on scientific logic, contained in the Kitzmiller v Dover Area School District hearing of several years ago. This should be essential reading for all involved parties to limiting a misuse of scientific method by the supporters of Creationism and Intelligent Design. What is more to the point is that the judgement in this case should provide a powerful disincentive for anyone (with the exception of highly paid lawyers) allowing and supporting creationism to pose as a school-based "science". Supporters of Creationism, with its denial of evolution, deceive young, untrained and impressionable minds at the expense of intellectual dignity and integrity!.

Dr Edward Willhoft
Epsom
UK