I am glad that the question of a written Constitution for Scotland will continue to be high on the agenda for the Scottish Government. However, in light of the Brexit vote and its impending impact on the people of Scotland, despite Scotland voting to remain in Europe, I believe the issue of a written Constitution for Scotland be considered at this present juncture regardless of the outcome of an Independent Scotland Referendum. This is essential as Brexit is imminent in the next four months albeit I am mindful of the response to Covid-19 taking precedence at this time.
